

Dr. Marc Whoriskey

Marc Whoriskey MD is our PoCUS HFX Fellow for 2024-25. He completed his Medical School and Family Medicine training at Dalhousie University. He then joined the Canadian Armed Forces and worked with several different units before pursuing his CFPC(EM) year at McGill University. Since completion he has performed as an emergency physician at the Halifax Infirmary, the IWK Pediatric Emergency, and in various Nova Scotia community Emergency Departments. In his Fellowship year he has led our Physician group with his interest in PoCUS directed peripheral anesthesia through performing many Fascia Iliaca compartment blocks and creating his Fellowship QI project using PoCUS directed anesthesia for patients with Rib fractures and Chest tubes. When not traveling for backcountry skiing in the Canadian Rockies, or Kiteboarding in the tropics, he enjoys trail time with his dog "maverick".
